Options for managing your student debt

You have enough on your mind — how you'll make your student loan payments shouldn't be one of your worries. We can help you explore loan forgiveness options and offer guidance for getting a handle on what you owe. Use the link or code at the bottom of the page to find these resources and learn more about how we can help.

Forgiveness is possible

We know you've invested a good deal of time and money into becoming an educator. In some cases, doing what you do best — teaching — can qualify you for programs that reduce or eliminate your student loan debt. For more information, check out Are You Eligible for Student Loan Forgiveness?

How much could you save?

As you explore your repayment or forgiveness options, find out how much NEA members like you are saving with help from the NEA Student Debt Navigator tool in the article More Educators Are Finding Real Relief From Their Student Loan Debt, then learn more about your eligibility for forgiveness programs.

Weighing refinancing options

As you consider your options, consult the article Should I Refinance My Student Loans? and see the pros and cons of refinancing, which might help you decide.
